Go with the Coe

Olympian Seb Coe visits Mossbourne Academy and gets set for 2012 with Ilia Staiwo

PUPILS from Mossbourne Academy raced three-times Olympic gold medallist Seb Coe during a school visit.

Lord Coe, who is Chairman of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG), was at the school to see how pupils are being inspired by the 2012 Olympic & Paralympic Games.

The day also saw him hand over a plaque in recognition of Mossbourne's participation in London 2012 education programme, Get Set. It is the 25th Hackney school to sign up. For more info & pictures see page 7.

SERVICES SAFE

By Gareth Greene

THE Council has set its budget for the coming financial year, protecting front line services despite Government spending cuts of £44million in 2011/2012 alone.

The Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, presented the £1.06billion budget proposals to full Council on 2 March in front of a packed Town Hall chamber.

At a time of great economic hardship for residents, and the country as a whole, the budget secured £218.4million for education; £165.6million for housing; £62.7million for children & youth services; £32.8million for waste, recycling and street cleaning; and £20.2million for sports, parks and libraries.

A further £107.5million was allocated to services for vulnerable adults including older and disabled people, those with mental health difficulties, and long-term health conditions. This year's budget means there will be no closure of leisure centres, libraries, or children's centres in the borough, and no reduction in the cleanliness of Hackney's streets.

Front line services were protected by making savings from a reduction in management costs, sharing resources across departments, and a continuing drive to introduce new and more efficient ways of working.

The meeting had to be suspended at one point due to anti-cuts protests in the public gallery, some calling on the Council to ignore the spending restrictions placed on local authorities by massive reductions in Government funding.

Finishing the budget statement, Mayor Pipe said: "The failure to pass a legal, balanced budget would result in immediate service collapse, and then the Council would be guilty of using the most vulnerable people in this borough as a political weapon."

The meeting concluded with the budget being passed by the Council.

Residents celebrate their efforts to create a garden that should yield a delicious crop of fruit and vegetables for them to enjoy

To eat and share

By Olaide Oyekanmi

RESIDENTS from Lordship North Estate, N16, have created their very own garden by transforming an unused piece of land into an oasis of green space.

Neighbours and friends from the estate got together on 26 February to dig and plant the garden, and also helped set up communal flower beds and picnic tables. Everyone involved wanted to create an area on the estate – which is near East and West Reservoirs in Stoke Newington – that they all could benefit from.

Residents received assistance from the London Wildlife Trust, environmental regeneration charity, Groundwork, which donated soil and bags, as well as from Hackney Homes.

Marie Miller, Treasurer, from the Lordship North Tenants and Residents Association, said: "It is amazing to see the transformation of the unused areas on the estate. We now have nice green spaces for us all to enjoy."

Christoph Tabi, from Hackney Homes, added: "We are always keen to support residents to use the green spaces on their estate to benefit everyone. In time, residents will see the juicy fruit and vegetables blooming all over the estate."

Marathon moves

Enthusiastic dancers strut their stuff at Rich Mix

By
Marcel Reinard

TESTING the very limits of their spandex leotards, fundraisers clocked up eight hours of dance floor philanthropy for a Hackney charity.

The big-hearted hip shakers raised £12,000 for Headway East London at its annual dance marathon, at Rich Mix, in E8.

The Kingsland Road charity provides support for people with acquired brain injuries, as well as increasing the awareness of the difficulties survivors face in day-to-day life.

Partying like it was 1929, more than 80 dancers of all abilities were helped by 30 volunteers, and cheered on by 100 spectators as they powered through a variety of styles and songs.

> "I love to watch people dance. I'm doing the marathon to raise money for Headway and have a good time"

Dance Marathons orginated in the US during the 1920s and have since spread internationally, raising money for many worthy causes.

In true dance marathon spirit, dance teachers, musicians, DJs and performers volunteered their time and skills to create the energetic and enthusiastic entertainment. Acts included Bollywood Dance London, Zumba, Sensical, Cut-A-Shine, and Swing Patrol. Additionally, over 20 local businesses donated prizes for award categories such as best fundraiser, team routine and air-guitar.

At the 26 February event, Errol Drysdale, a Headway member, said: "It's a great feeling to move every bit of my body and to listen to the music. I'll be in my wheelchair for most of the night but I'll get up to wriggle my hips if there is a really good song on. I love to watch people dance. I'm doing the dance marathon to raise money for Headway and have a good time."

Miriam Lantsbury, Headway East London chief executive, congratulated all participants, adding: 'without you this event would not be a success'.

Message from the Mayor

Our budget is set

HACKNEY Council has set its budget for this year. After eight years of planned and sustainable growth which has seen the borough improve beyond recognition, we were faced with having to work with the biggest single cut to the Council's grant in living memory. It's a harsh position for a council that has gone from being regarded as a local authority mess to one whose efficiency meant it was able to bring new and expanded services to the borough, along with massive investment such as the school building programmes.

So how can I both vociferously oppose these cuts and implement a plan that sees £44million less spent in the borough this year? The answer is that simple refusal to set a proper, workable budget brings with it immediate and far worse consequences for this borough. As elected Mayor of Hackney, I have no option but to put local people above rhetoric and propose a budget that protects front line services.

A few have argued that we should 'defy the cuts' and refuse to set a budget, but that would only lead to devastation to services and misery across the borough. Refusing to agree a legal budget does not result in councillors being surcharged or imprisoned, nor do services just keep running as they have in the previous year. Instead, councillors are eventually sidelined while Government appointees are brought in to take the decisions. Meanwhile, a great deal of council expenditure is frozen, preventing many people from receiving the services they need. Extra money would still not come and there would be no locally elected representatives involved to prioritise the remaining expenditure. The priorities of Government appointees would likely be different from those of the borough, and come with no requirement on them to maximise service delivery to residents. The whole process would leave the Council with even less money to spend on services than it does now, not more.

There are times when running a Council requires making difficult decisions, taking the option that doesn't appear popular, but still reflects the values upon which you were elected to serve. This year's budget protects front line services by bringing forward a whole set of savings and efficiencies and reductions in senior management. Some we would have introduced anyway in future years in order to recycle the cash into more services – just as we have been doing over the past eight years. Instead we have had to accelerate those savings all into one year, as well as limiting future investment, in order to backfill the reduction in grant. It means that residents will experience a level of protection to front line services almost unseen in any other part of the country.

Further reductions to council grants are proposed over the next three years. But we will tackle the financial challenges to come by sticking to our principles. Decisions will be taken on the basis of what will best protect services, and that our most vulnerable people will always be our first concern.

Short link, giant connection

Clockwise from above: trains waiting to depart Highbury & Islington; first service on the departure board; new route on the Overground map; train driver Osahon Owie; looking down tunnel from Dalston Junction; and (inset) the disused line before work began

By Susie Haywood

IT'S only 2.1km of track – but the latest London Overground link completed Hackney's connections to the Tube network when it opened three months earlier than planned.

The £50million line from Dalston Junction to Canonbury, and Highbury & Islington runs under Kingsland High Street, along the route of an older track decommissioned in the 1980s. It means passengers wishing to reach Victoria Line or national rail services at Highbury & Islington can now get there from Shoreditch High Street in just 12 minutes.

The Council campaigned for many years to secure the new stations and a London Underground link for the borough. Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, added: "I'm delighted this latest link now offers people who live and work in the borough, as well as visitors, a fast, direct connection to the Victoria Line. Easy access to the Tube network will make a huge difference to residents and businesses and I'd like to thank Transport for London (TfL) for its commitment in delivering this project."

Boris Johnson, Mayor of London, officially opened the link on 28 February. He said: "The engineers have performed marvels to complete their work three months early and this will provide a crucial connection for people heading to the Olympic Park next year."

TfL forecasts that 33million people will use the link this year, and demand is expected to increase to 40million by 2016. Eight trains an hour are set to run along the new section of track. From Dalston Junction, they connect to three other new London Overground stations that opened in Hackney last April – Haggerston, Hoxton and Shoreditch High Street. The line then runs as far south as New Cross, Crystal Palace and West Croydon, currently carrying over 70,000 passengers a day.

A final phase of work will extend the line further from Clapham Junction to Dalston Junction via Surrey Quays. This link will complete a planned 'orbital railway' for London, and is due to open in 2012.

World Book Day is celebrated in 100 countries around the globe

Tiayana and Jada, both four, from Southwold Primary School, try to carry on reading – despite interruptions from Mr Nosey and a photographer

A FAMILIAR face has been poking his nose in at Hackney's libraries to mark World Book Day on 3 March.
Mr Men character, Mr Nosey, visited libraries across the borough from 1 to 3 March, accompanied by a series of fun activities and story-telling sessions.
Other events over the three days included badge making; a book character costume competition at Hackney Central; a puppet show at Stoke Newington; and, for older readers, an exploration of urban teenage novels with author, Ola Amoako, at Clapton.
The idea for World Book Day originated in Catalonia, Spain, where roses and books are given to loved ones on St George's Day – a tradition that started over 90 years ago.

41 new homes

By James Willsher

THE regeneration of an estate has passed another milestone, with the topping out of its first new Council housing development.

The project is being funded by the Homes & Communities Agency, set up to create opportunities for people to live in high quality, sustainable accommodation.

Its Chief Executive, Pat Ritchie, attended the ceremony on 22 February to mark the completion of the top-most point of the Bridport House site, near Shoreditch Park. She said: "Our funding is enabling the Council to increase its provision of affordable homes, all of which meet our high environmental and design standards."

Construction work by Willmott Dixon began last summer, and will replace 20 flats with 41 new homes for residents, who have been temporarily re-housed.

The new homes are energy efficient to Level 4 of the Government's Code for Sustainable Homes. They will be managed by Hackney Homes, and are expected to be complete by the summer.

Bridport is the first phase of the regeneration of Colville Estate.

Maggie Worster, Chair of the Colville Estate Tenants and Residents Association, said: "This is the end of years of hard work by residents and the Council. It is the first step in a journey to the regeneration of Colville and the new homes and neighbourhood that our residents deserve."

Cllr Karen Alcock, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, welcomed local residents, Ms Ritchie, and John Campion, Managing Director of Willmott Dixon Housing, to the topping out event.

> "The first step in a journey to the regeneration of Colville and the new homes & neighbourhood that our residents deserve"

She said: "The Council is committed to the regeneration of the borough's estates, and is among the top-performing London boroughs for affordable housing provision."

Mr Campion added: "The team is very impressed with the timber-build system we are using and its sustainability values, such as creating zero waste, which means there is practically no site waste going to landfill."

OLYMPIC champion Seb Coe visited Mossbourne Community Academy to see how the 2012 Games are inspiring young people to excel.

He toured the school on 1 March with five Hackney 2012 Youth Ambassadors, and joined an athletics training session in the gym led by UK number-one long jumper JJ Jegede.

Lord Coe, who is Chairman of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG), said: “This is a sensational school. I’ve been bowled over by what I’ve seen. The work here is of the highest quality.”

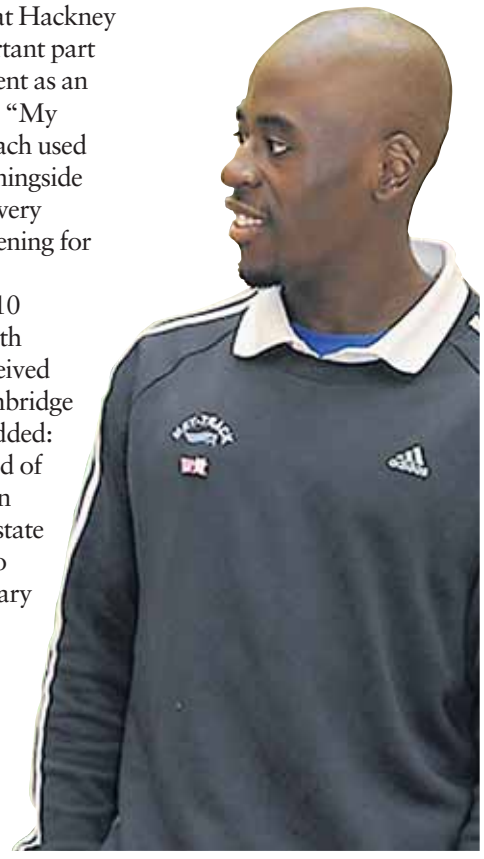

In recognition of Mossbourne’s participation in the London 2012 education programme, Get Set, he presented pupils with a plaque, as the 25th Hackney school to sign up to the scheme. He said: “You guys have romped away with this award. It’s our way of thanking you for what you’ve done.”

Lord Coe, a middle distance running star of the 1980s and winner of three Olympic gold medals, also revealed that Hackney played an important part in his development as an athlete. He said: “My conditioning coach used to teach at Morningside School. I went every morning and evening for many years.”

Hearing that 10 Mossbourne sixth formers had received offers from Cambridge University, he added: “I’m really proud of that, having been educated in the state system. I went to the local secondary modern and then grammar school to do my A-levels.”

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, also joined the tour. He said: “The Youth Ambassadors who welcomed Seb Coe, the young athletes who performed in front of him, and the students he spoke to during the visit are all a credit to Hackney.

“I would encourage as many schools as possible to take part in the Get Set programme.”

What 2moro may bring

Young actors explore themes of crime, fear of crime and anti-social behaviour in a week-long festival of drama, debate and workshops

By Felicity Jump

YOUNG actors from Hackney taking part in the '2moro?' Festival, wowed audiences with powerful performances this half term.

Three plays were shown on 23 February, all of which were scripted by young people from the borough. They were performed by 13 to 19-year-olds from a theatre group based at the Bridge Academy; 12 to 19-year-olds from Woodberry Down estate and the surrounding area; and young people from the Fusion theatre group, based at Hackney Free and Parochial School.

'The Road', created by professional writer David Lane with input from the Fusion theatre group, tackled issues ranging from gun crime to teenage pregnancy and citizenship.

Calvin, 22, said: "Reading the script made me want to take part. It was a refreshing play, and really interesting."

The project has been running since last July and aims to help young people become responsible adults through theatre, engagement and drama.

The project is led by theatre professionals, and assisted by four local young people with a background of youth offending, who have received training through the scheme and turned their lives around to become active, responsible citizens.

After the performances, the audience and actors joined a panel that included Chief Inspector Jane Easton, from Hackney Police, and Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Youth Services, to engage in a lively debate around issues ranging from anti-social behaviour and knife and gun crime, to the importance of becoming an active and responsible citizen.

Also on the panel was Ian Levy, who set up the Robert Levy foundation in memory of his 16-year-old son, who was murdered in Hackney in 2004. It aims to engage young people in positive activities and help create a better image of the borough. Chief Inspector Easton said: "How we engage with young people, and hear their views on community policing, is extremely important. The debate was very informative, and I'll certainly be using feedback gained through the session to inform our work."

Cllr Krishna added: "This was an amazing event. It was great to see the energy and enthusiasm of the young facilitators and the response of the young people who attended."

2moro? is a Team Hackney-funded youth project, delivered by Immediate Theatre and youth charity, Fairbridge in partnership with the Council.

2moro? is a peer-led scheme. It aims to reach 500 young people at 20 events every year, helping them to make a positive transition to adulthood

A tale of finding a voice

Hackney-born musician, Anita Blay, otherwise known as CocknBullKid

By Marcel Reinard

THERE'S a rumour about Anita Blay: while working on a shoot, a photographer – not completely happy with the results – asked 'can you sit more… urban?'

"It's true," says the Homerton resident, combining laughter with a hint of lament. Adding: "I was doing a shoot for… a publication that should've known better. When he realised what he'd said he went, 'um, just look more relaxed'. To this day I'm not sure what he meant."

But Anita, also known as CocknBullKid, was never one to let others dictate who she is. Like so many musicians of the last decade she was tipped for stardom after releasing a string of infectious songs on social media websites from her bedroom. Audiences loved her lo-fi synth-pop and expected big things on a wave of 80s Casio keyboards, shoulder pads and back-combing. Then she disappeared. For two years.

"I needed to craft what I was doing and I didn't want to be lumped in with that electronic sound," she says. Adding: "It's overwhelming to see things about yourself and not even be sure what you're trying to do. So I didn't read music magazines or listen to new music for 18 months. I decided to go away to find out what I wanted."

A Hackney and Walthamstow local all her life, Anita has always been fascinated with tales – hence the moniker – remembering writing stories for her classmates at St Scholastica Primary School in E5. This developed into song writing and while she didn't play any instruments, she could sing. "I had a digital keyboard; I'd just end up writing pop songs to a bossa nova preset," she says.

Entering singing competitions was the focus of her early years, as well as dancing to her then-favourite group Eternal, but the turning point was joining North London youth studio Tribal Tree – which Plan B and a third of N-Dubz had attended.

She says: "After I left I bought a laptop, started making music and just uploaded everything on to MySpace. I wasn't a producer, but I hoped people would recognise what I was trying to do and help me achieve it. I'm still working with some of them, and it's how I got a press team, manager; it was quite a crucial tool."

The first release 'On My Own' was as fashionable as they come, uber-cool and glitchy, it earnt her a spot on 'Later With Jools Holland' when she was still unsigned. But for the singer it was all work in progress. Although proud of her Hackney roots – she describes The Lauriston pub, Last Tuesday Society and Mare Street's Turkish restaurants as some of her favourite haunts – she says she wanted to make music that reached people who weren't just in E9.

> "I needed to craft what I was doing and I didn't want to be lumped in with that electronic sound"

Now back with the album 'Adulthood' – think Abba meets Morrissey – it's enthusiastic, emotional, full of instruments; at heart a real pop record.

"There was a lot of self discovery. A lot of people say I sound different, I think I do too. Some say the album is pop with dark lyrics as if they're at odds, but I don't see it as a contradiction," she says.

How is she dealing with the media attention this time? "I'm coping fine. I've been waiting five years now, I'm ready. Even with Tribal Tree we were thrown into the deep end with 10 A&Rs in a room and you just had to sing your soul out."

With help from producers Chilly Gonzales, Leon Howes, and writers who had worked with Florence and the Machine and Marina and the Diamonds, she believes she's matured to create an 'honest' album. "I think I've found my voice," she declares.

Q: I know I can recycle plastic bottles, but what about juice cartons, if I live on an estate?

A: Many cartons for milk and juice, as well as some foods that would traditionally come in a tin, are made from Tetra Pak, a combination of cardboard, foil and plastics.
Tetra Pak can be put in the mixed recycling bins on estates, as can cardboard cartons and boxes.
All plastic packaging can now be recycled too – not just bottles.
This includes trays from ready meals, and packaging for fruit and vegetables.
For more info about exactly what can be recycled, see the contact details below.

The gardener's apprentices

Grower Ximena Ransom, a graduate of the Growing Communities apprenticeship scheme, during her training and (inset) fellow graduate, Sophie Verhagen, who grows on a site at the Castle Climbing Centre in Stoke Newington

By Kate Gibney

A SOCIAL enterprise is offering organic vegetable growing classes throughout the spring and summer.

The sessions kick off on 26 March and continue until the end of August. They range from all-day courses in setting up an organic vegetable garden; to tips on how to grow organic produce in containers; or create richer compost for your garden.

The workshops are run and supported as part of the Capital Growth programme, a fund that aims to create 2012 new community food growing spaces across London by the end of 2012.

> "We hope to offer apprentices a chance to take on their own organic site when they have finished their training"

There's also still time to apply for training to become a professional gardener. Growing Communities is on the hunt for four new 'urban apprentice growers' as part of its mission to get more people trained to grow organic produce. It has recently been awarded funds by the Big Lottery's local food programme to expand its 'Patchwork Farm' scheme, which provides some of the produce for their organic vegetable box delivery business.

Sara Davies, from Growing Communities, will be training the apprentices. She said: "We're looking for people who are serious about becoming a grower and who want to help us increase the amount of organic food that is grown in London. We hope to offer apprentices a chance to take on their own organic site when they have finished their training to grow salad for our boxes."

The deadline for apprenticeship applications is 9 March.

The Middlesex Filter Beds are in the Hackney section of the Lee Valley Regional Park

Have your say on Lee Valley visions

TWO events this month will give residents an opportunity to have their say about the future of the Lee Valley.

Proposals by the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority for the future development of the area over the next 10 to 15 years are open to public consultation until 29 March.

The authority will be holding an exhibition to present its ideas at the Waterworks Centre, off Lea Bridge Road, E10, on 11 and 12 March, from 10am-2pm. Residents are invited to come along and discuss proposals with staff.

The second event is being organised by the Lea Valley Federation, which describes itself as a 'critical friend' of the authority. It is holding a meeting at the Round Chapel, in Powerscroft Road, E5, on 15 March at 7.30pm, to discuss the authority's proposals, alongside its own vision for the future of the park.

A little bit of Give or Take

By Mary Anna Wright

MORE than 100 people visited Shacklewell School on 19 February to swap unwanted clothes, books and toys.

The Council-run Give or Take Day was the first opportunity of the year for people to exchange household goods and other items they no longer needed for something they wanted.

Around a tonne of material was diverted from landfill thanks to the event and many residents walked away happy with the items they had picked up for free.

Mary Johnstone, from E8, said: "We are moving house so it was a great way to pass on the stuff we had sorted from our kitchen. There were some really good books and furniture there, but I made myself resist the urge to take anything home."

Some of the goodies on offer at a previous Give or Take event and (right) a resident snaps up an unwanted vase

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Reusing in this way is an important way of making Hackney greener. The message is getting through now about how important recycling is, with more residents recycling more items. But now we all need to start thinking about how we can reuse items we don't want and reduce the amount of rubbish we produce."

Give or Take Days are usually run three times a year and are always advertised in Hackney Today. You can also watch out for them by following the Council on Facebook and Twitter.

Light bulb moment

HACKNEY'S Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Cllr Feryal Demirci, was out and about on 16 February testing out facilities for light bulb recycling.

Since December, residents have been able to recycle low-energy bulbs at five sites around the borough, thanks to a ground breaking partnership between the Council and green company Recolight. Hackney is the first London borough to offer this service. The Government, retailers and energy companies are phasing out traditional light bulbs.

Cllr Demirci said: "I am very proud that Hackney was the first London borough to offer this service. Over the last couple of months it has become possible to recycle more materials in more ways around Hackney."

Light bulbs of any sort should not be put in the Council's Green Box collection, because if they break they could be harmful to crews. Older style light bulbs are not recyclable. Bulb recycling sites can be found at: Chatsworth Road, E5; Lordship Road, N16; Old Street, EC1; Martel Place, E8; and Well Street, E9.

Buildings for their future

YOUNG architects from Lauriston school triumphed in the 'Design My Learning Space LIVE!' competition, winning £1,000 of IT equipment for their school in the process.

Pupils took their designs for improvements to their E9 school site, including adding a tree house that doubled up as a learning space, to the ExCeL exhibition centre event, and with help from architects, created hand-crafted prototypes of their blueprints.

The 23 February contest aimed to bring together architects and schools, enabling children to express their views on their buildings and recommend design improvements.

Beacon colleges

By Marcel Reinard

TWO Hackney colleges have scooped prestigious national awards for best practice.

Hackney Community College (HCC) picked up an Association of Colleges (AoC) award for 'widening participation'. While BSix sixth form won a City & Guilds accolade for 'staff development'. Only 18 prizes were given out to UK colleges at the AoC Beacons Awards on 9 February – making Hackney's two gongs a major achievement.

HCC Principal, Ian Ashman, said he was 'so proud' of the mental health education and employment team, which won the award. Adding: "This is yet another accolade for the college that recognises our strong partnerships and the significant role we play in our local community."

BSix and HCC staff collecting their Beacon Awards

The service – partnered with East London Foundation Trust, NHS City & Hackney and voluntary groups – provides training for mental health service users, and has helped more than 4,000 people into education and work.

BSix's winning initiative was its 'University for Teachers' project, which aims to bolster student success by also driving up teachers' aspirations.

Principal Ken Warman said: "Our staff and students really put their hearts into all of the development opportunities we provide and this award is a great acknowledgement of everyone's commitment to learning."

Four years ago, Ofsted inspectors rated both colleges as just 'satisfactory'. Today HCC is graded 'good' overall, while BSix is 'good for leadership and management' and its 'capacity to improve', having made significant progress overall.

An independent report about A-level results concluded the performance of both establishments is comparable to the top 10 per cent of schools and colleges in the country.

News in brief

Silver medal to Cardinal Pole

CARDINAL Pole Catholic School secured the runner-up spot in a contest looking for events that could be held in the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

For the 'Make It Our Future' project, the Homerton students devised a jobs fair to show-case careers including fashion, retail, catering, sport, design and the performing arts. Their pitch was pipped at the post by a community culture festival proposal, the brainchild of pupils from a Waltham Forest school.

Over the last three months, a selection of host borough schools have been visited by staff from the Olympic Park Legacy Company and Westfield Stratford City to discuss pupils' ambitions to transform the area with new homes, shops, sports venues and community facilities.

Our Lady's sixth formers with a Gayhurst pupil

Help before the big move

SIXTH formers from Our Lady's Convent High School have been helping primary school children deal with anxieties about moving to secondary school.

They led sessions for Gayhurst Primary School pupils on being ambitious and the importance of communication at secondary school.

The proxy teachers also used a budget of £50 to offer activities such as designing a T-shirt about peer pressure and writing messages on helium balloons.

During the lesson, Priscilla Boonin, 17, said: "We asked them what they wanted to do when they grew up and they are role playing it. We also got them to write on stickers the skills they will need to do the job well."

The project was part of the 'Stepping Up' programme, run by education business partnership Inspire! and supported by investment bank UBS.

Stepping Up gives young people the chance to undertake a team project that benefits their community while developing enterprise and employment skills. After getting tips from the bank, the sixth formers returned to UBS to give a presentation on what they had learnt.

Win a pair of top-price tickets to Clybourne Park

ACCLAIMED by critics and audiences alike, the Royal Court's sell-out smash hit comedy has opened at the Wyndham's Theatre.

Hailed 'shockingly entertaining' and 'appallingly funny' this devastating satire explores the ever contentious themes of race and property ownership from two time periods – 1959 and 2009 and leaves the audience asking whether the issues festering beneath the floorboards are actually the same despite the 50-year time difference…
Clybourne Park, which also won Evening Standard Theatre Award for Best Play 2010, is showing at Wyndham Theatre until 7 April. For more information, call: 020 7565 5000; or visit: www.clybournepark.co.uk

English Touring Opera

Hackney Empire, until 12 March

TWO Puccini operas, an epic Mozart masterpiece and a family friendly opera of a Roald Dahl classic: the diverse sum of English Touring Opera's return to Hackney Empire.

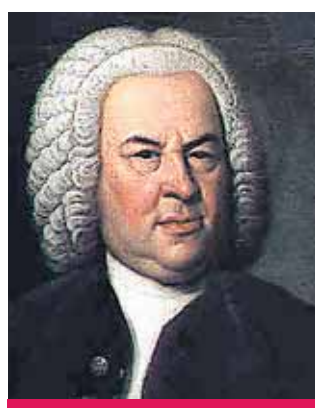

Last performing at the theatre in 2009, these operatic nomads offer accessible productions featuring some of the finest classical music talent in the business.

Their latest spell starts with a Puccini double header (until 11 March): Il Tabarro, a moody thriller set on a barge in Paris; and Gianni Schicchi, a sparkling comedy featuring the famous aria 'O mio babbino caro' – the theme from 'A Room With A View'.

La Clemenza di Tito (12 March) is one of Mozart's final and most compelling works. Its political story of terrorism, betrayal and forgiveness sees tortured hero Titus choose passion over loyalty.

The company will also deliver the Tobias Picker version of Fantastic Mr Fox (10 March), dripping with the colourful vibrancy found in the natural world. Sinister farmers famously do battle with a family of foxes in this engaging and witty show suitable for all ages.

Dave Gorman's Screen Guild

Hoxton Hall, 130 Hoxton Street, N1 6SH

THE nation's most treasured Microsoft PowerPoint presenter is hosting a new monthly night of stand up at Hoxton Hall. Dave Gorman, the comic famously challenged to find 54 of his namesakes, one for each card in a full playing deck, packs his laptop and projector for a Hackney season of his new material.
He says: "The last tour it was easy with the one-man-and-a-mic stand-up stuff because there are loads of clubs in London where I can pop along and do five, 10, 15 minutes or what have you. But it was much harder to do the same for the stuff that involved PowerPoint.
"The equipment doesn't really fit into most venues and even when it does it isn't really possible to set it up for the sake of a few minutes in a mixed bill. So I'm forming a double act with a screen and we're going to host a show together.
"It'll give me a chance to experiment with new ideas as well as introduce a bunch of acts I really, really like. And all in a fantastic venue – Hoxton Hall – that has bags of atmosphere."
Tickets for March's show have sold out however dates in April, May, June and July are still currently available.

The recent Built 2 Work graduates with their certificates at the Robin Redmond Resource Centre in Woodberry Down

By Nadine Tapping

A GROUP of proud young people received certificates at an event to celebrate their achievements on the latest Built 2 Work construction training programme.

The ceremony on 17 February at the Robin Redmond Resource Centre, N4, saw 14 trainees congratulated for passing the course with flying colours. The four-week training programme for residents aged 16 to 25 offered a chance to gain hands on experience in skills including plumbing, tiling, carpentry, painting and decorating, and health & safety.

Keisha, 16, said: "At first I was really anxious about using the machinery but now I feel confident and completing the course has given me more direction to go into property development."

Previous graduates have continued training in specialist areas of construction and others are now working with established companies.

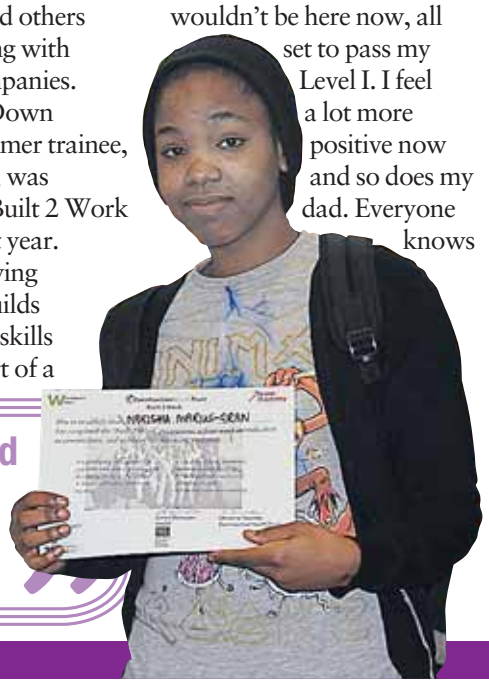

Woodberry Down resident and former trainee, Adem Mehmet, was referred to the Built 2 Work programme last year. He is now studying for a City & Guilds Level I in multi-skills with the support of a Construction Youth Trust bursary.

Adem said: "It opened a door to something I didn't know about. Without the Built 2 Work course I wouldn't be here now, all set to pass my Level I. I feel a lot more positive now and so does my dad. Everyone knows that I'm trying and can see I'm on the right path out of trouble."

Another former graduate, Mark Julian, now works for consultancy firm REDS10. He said: "With a family on the way, I can sort my life out. Built 2 Work is for people who want to do something with their lives; you can learn the basics and get introduced to the right people who can help you progress."

Built 2 Work is run by Woodberry Works and The Construction Youth Trust, in partnership with the Council, Hackney Homes, Lakehouse, Mullalley, Berkeley Homes and Manor House Development Trust. Its Director Simon Donovan, said: "Construction is one of the oldest trades and you can see the amount of creativity individuals who work on developments like Woodberry Down possess."

BUDDING judo champs can train at after-school clubs at The City Academy Hackney, E9, and Cardinal Pole Catholic School, E9.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "The Council wants to encourage young people to participate in sport. We are helping schools do this by supporting the setting up of clubs like these, and it's great to see how well they are doing."

Shaun Purcell, Head of PE at Cardinal Pole, added: "Head coach Gabs has put an incredible amount of time into laying the foundations of this club. He is hopeful that, with the correct guidance, some of the members will progress to national standard in the future."

The clubs, which started last September, are funded until the end of 2011 by the Council, which worked with the British Judo Association, Sports Unlimited Funding and Capital London Judo coaches to set them up.

Try a session, without booking, at Cardinal Pole, Kenworthy Road, E9; or City Academy, Homerton Row, E9, every Monday & Wednesday. A resident picks up some information on NHS dentists at an event in Dalston's Gillett Square

All stories by Marcel Reinard

RESIDENTS were able to attend two road shows to promote free NHS dental services in the borough.

NHS City and Hackney organised the events at Gillett Square and the Alevi Centre in Dalston to highlight the availability of NHS dentists in the area, promote the range of treatments available, and explain NHS charges and exemptions. Children under 16 receive free dental treatment, as do many adults including those under 19 in full time education, pregnant women, or people receiving state benefits.

Alice Benton, the NHS trust's deputy director for primary care commissioning, called it a 'great opportunity to learn more about the NHS dental services in Hackney and the City'. Adding: "We have good access to NHS dental services in Hackney and the City, but in the past some patients have found it difficult to find a dentist, get an appointment or get treated. This campaign helps address those concerns, plus other popular misconceptions about charges and exemptions."

News in brief

A good day to quit

SMOKERS can take advantage of a range of support services to help quit, up to and beyond, national No Smoking Day on 9 March.

On the official day, a stall in Hackney Service Centre, 1 Hillman Street, E8, will offer carbon monoxide and lung age testing, advice and giveaways.

Over at Tesco in Morning Lane, smoking cessation community champions hope to liaise with faith, elder, black and ethnic minority groups, as well as vulnerable adults, young families and new entrants to the UK, to help them kick the habit. Lung tests and advice will be available.

In addition, 'Stop While You Shop' returns. The initiative, will run at Kingsland Shopping Centre every Monday and Thursday, 3pm to 7pm, until 28 April.

Frances Schmocker, from NHS City and Hackney, said: "Our first Stop While You Shop event last year was a real success, helping more than 100 Hackney smokers to quit. People really liked it because they got quit smoking support at a time and place that suited them."

The annual cost of treating smoking-related illnesses in the UK is around £5billion. According to NHS City and Hackney, out of 152 primary care trusts in England, the trust ranks 13th for the number of quitters per 100,000 population.

Hackney's teenage pregnancy rates have fallen further than across London and England since 1998, according to ONS statistics

Leading on teen pregnancy rate drop

TEENAGE pregnancy rates in Hackney have fallen by 37 per cent over 10 years, according the Office of National Statistics.

The reduction is much higher than that seen across the rest of England (18 per cent), and London (20 per cent) between 1998 and 2009. On average, nearly 49 local girls in every 1,000 became pregnant in 2009, compared to over 77 in 1998. NHS City and Hackney said the reduction was due to a combination of factors that led to teenagers making better informed choices.

Education played a key role, with 1,000 teachers being trained to deliver sex and relationships education; a sexual health bus that tours the community, and the development of the SHO-me sexual health website, which attracts more than 7,000 visitors a month.

A range of sexual health and contraception services are widely available for young people in the area, including a condom distribution scheme, and a dedicated holistic health service for teens, CHYPS Plus, in Lower Clapton.

Local NHS Deputy Director of Public Health, Dr Jose Figueroa, said: "These figures show more and more young people in Hackney are seeking out contraception information. However, we cannot be complacent as we still have much more to do. We encourage young people to take a proactive approach to sexual health – to talk about it with parents, partners and professionals."

Gone fishing

Clockwise from above: postcard of the White House c1905; James Jackman Beresford, aged 72, with granddaughter, Marie Louise Beresford, aged three, outside the White House in 1864; lithograph showing a distant view of the White House c1833; ticket for the White House fishery; map of fishing 'swims' near the White House from 'The Angler's Companion'

By Sally England, Local Studies Librarian

THE waterways of Hackney Marshes are still popular with anglers, and in the past were regarded as one of the finest places to fish in the country.

The marshes were rural and remote, with the 'silvery waters' of the River Lea 'sparkling over clear gravelly shallows,' according to H Chipperfield's memories published in the North London Guardian in 1893.

The White House Fishery was an isolated but popular spot, with nearly 150 annual subscribers in its heyday, and more visitors buying daily tickets. The building was originally a ferryman's house, marked on two different maps in 1745 as Pank's Ferry and Tyler's Ferry, presumably reflecting changes in the holder of the post. It was common for those who lived and worked along the river to hold fishing rights for which they could grant licences, and perhaps it was when a bridge was built that the ferryman's house developed its reputation as a prime angling location.

The most famous occupants were James Jackman Beresford (1792-1866) and his son George. It was during George's time in the late 19th century that the White House displayed a collection of locally caught stuffed birds and fish, including a rare cream-coloured courser (more at home in North Africa) and an eel, landed in 1766, which weighed 22lb 7oz (nearly 10kg).

In 1868, 'The Angler's Companion: being a description of where to find fish and how to fish, the various swims in the Horse & Groom, Lea Bridge, and White House' was published, a rare first edition of which is held in the Local Studies Library. It describes 27 'swims' near the White House and states fish were so abundant 'you might, with the use of a casting net, very soon fill a cart'.

However, as London grew its domestic and industrial waste grew too, much of it ending up in surrounding rivers. The Lea was heavily polluted, the fish stock decimated, and the White House's time as a fishery came to an end. It remained an important location for storing rescue equipment to aid those who had fallen into the river – and also to retrieve bodies of the drowned.

A letter to Hackney Gazette of 23 March 1871, called for Beresford to be granted a licence to sell spirits, as brandy was thought essential for reviving those who had fallen into cold water. A licence was granted and the White House became a pub, with Beresford developing a reputation as a vigilant keeper of law and order. By 1909 however, it had become more disreputable, and was being used as a football dressing-room when a silver watch worth £3 was stolen. The next May, it was raided by police, who found 30 local men drinking illegally on a Sunday morning, having said they were travellers to get alcohol. In 1910, a closure notice was served. Although the brewery and a prospective licensee protested at Stoke Newington Sessions, the decision was upheld after police said the landlord had repeatedly sold alcohol after hours, and that it was impossible for officers to approach without being spotted, so offenders were able to escape and return later. The building was supposed to be demolished soon after, but was still listed as holding rescue equipment in a Hackney Street Directory for 1914-15. During the Second World War unexploded bombs were detonated on the marshes, and the landscape dramatically changed. Today the land where the White House stood is 14 feet (4.5m) higher than it was, and only a footbridge over the Lea stands where the original ferry once crossed.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

The Hoxton Apprentice doesn't just offer opportunities in catering. Reshma Begum, 19, started working behind the scenes in January, as a personnel assistant in the HR department.
Previously Reshma had worked as an administrative assistant, an exam invigilator, and provided telephone support for housing association residents in Poplar. But she wanted to improve her career prospects by increasing her range of skills in a more specific area.
Reshma said: "I have learned to liaise with members of staff, management and external clients in a professional manner. I make sure legal and technical information is properly filed, and have been developing my own interpersonal skills. I hope to put all this to use and find a great job opportunity."

Panna Cotta

Serves 8

Preparation time
30mins

cooling time
at least 1hr

Ingredients

- 750ml double cream
- 250ml full fat milk
- 125g granulated sugar
- 3.5 gelatine leaves
- 1 split vanilla bean pod

Method

- Get all of your equipment together, including a tray of small bowls for the individual puddings
- Separate the gelatine sheets carefully and place into a bowl of cold water to soften
- Use a large saucepan or pot – this will allow plenty of surface area so the mixture can heat quickly without burning. Measure all the ingredients and place the milk, cream, sugar and vanilla beans into the pot and bring to the boil. It is important to be accurate when measuring out the ingredients or the panna cottas will be too hard, or won't set at all
- Keep a good eye on the mixture as it boils over quite quickly once it has reached temperature. Once brought to the boil, remove from the stove
- Squeeze excess liquid from the soaking gelatine sheets and add them to the cream mixture. Whisk until dissolved
- Cool the mixture down by sitting the pan in a sink of iced water. Make sure the tap to the sink has been turned so that it is not above the mixture
- Strain to remove vanilla beans. Then pour into bowls and refrigerate until ready to use.

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house. Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality.
Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people. If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Ben Anderson on: 020 7749 2800.

What to scrutinise?

VIEWS are being sought by Hackney's scrutiny councillors on what matters most to people in the borough.
The Council wants to know what residents' top priorities are as part of an annual survey to shape next year's scrutiny agenda.
Scrutiny commissions are made up of councillors who work across party political lines to investigate issues of local concern, and they need to know what residents want to see reviewed from June this year. Good scrutiny plays an important role in the development of better policies and improving performance, and can hold the Council and outside agencies to account, including the police and health service.

The survey runs until 15 April. To take part, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/scrutiny-residents-survey; alternatively, to request a hard copy of the survey, e-mail: scrutiny@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3341.

Win a rechargeable battery kit

ANSWER a few questions about recycling and reuse to be in with a chance of winning one of 30 rechargeable battery packs. Each pack contains four fully charged AA rechargeable batteries and a charger for AA and AAA batteries. To take part, until 19 March, visit: www.surveymonkey.com/s/batteryquiz

Hackney

A unique catering opportunity at the spiritual home of Sunday League Football

GLL seeks expressions of interest from Caterers with turnover in excess of £1 million per annum, which will be able to deliver a multi faceted catering operation at the newly built Hackney Marshes Centre.

Set on the southern end of the famous Hackney Marshes, The Hackney Marshes Centre provides high quality changing facilities for the extensive number of sports pitches situated on the Hackney Marsh and also offers high quality accessible seminar and education rooms on the first floor alongside a kitchen, bar and outside terrace with spectacular views across the Marshes.

To compliment the highly successful commercial weekend sports business, a Centre programme is being developed to increase the use of the facility during the week and all year round, and the catering operation will need to support this. The appointed company will need to demonstrate the ability to operate other successful café concepts with turnover in excess of £500,000.

The three-year contract which will be awarded following competitive tender will commence in summer 2011.

Initial expressions of interest should be directed to:

GLL seeks expressions of interest from Caterers with turnover in excess of £1 million per annum, which will be able to deliver a multi faceted catering operation at the newly built Hackney Marshes Centre.

Set on the southern end of the famous Hackney Marshes, The Hackney Marshes Centre provides high quality changing facilities for the extensive number of sports pitches situated on the Hackney Marsh and also offers high quality accessible seminar and education rooms on the first floor alongside a kitchen, bar and outside terrace with spectacular views across the Marshes.

To compliment the highly successful commercial weekend sports business, a Centre programme is being developed to increase the use of the facility during the week and all year round, and the catering operation will need to support this. The appointed company will need to demonstrate the ability to operate other successful café concepts with turnover in excess of £500,000.

The three-year contract which will be awarded following competitive tender will commence in summer 2011.

Initial expressions of interest should be directed to:

Making 6 million recycling collections

Delivering 730,000 hours of home care

Sweeping 296 miles of streets every day

Introduction

THE coming year will see Hackney Council deliver a budget that protects frontline services. At a time when the whole country faces difficult financial decisions the Council's £1.065 billion budget, effective from April this year, continues to prioritise safety, well-being and support for those that need it most through the delivery of services for residents.

£58 million will be spent on services to keep Hackney a clean and good place to live, with investment in 161 miles of public roads: all residential streets will be swept at least twice a week, alongside a regular town centre intense cleaning programme to help keep the borough's footpaths safe and clean. With crime recently announced as being at an 11 year low the Council will also continue to provide local Community Safety teams and work in close partnership with the police to help tackle crime and anti-social behaviour.

Over £20 million will go towards developing sport, leisure and healthy activity in the borough. This will include maintaining Hackney's award-winning green spaces and continuing a full library service in Hackney's 8 libraries – which are expecting to receive a record 1.5 million visits in 2011/12. This coming year will also see the opening of the new Dalston C.L.R. James Library and Hackney Archives.

£218.4 million will be invested into education services in the borough, providing schooling and nursery care for more than 10,000 young people and children. An additional £62.7 million will help create opportunities for 7,000 8 – 19 year olds through training for employment, youth centres and care for the less-abled. The Council's Building Schools for the Future programme will also continue, rebuilding or completely refurbishing all of the borough's secondary schools by 2015.

2011/12 will also see over £107 million providing services for adults. This will include delivering 730,000 hours of home care – 55,000 hours of this will be for residents with learning disabilities or mental health issues. The money will also support the people who act as unpaid carers for loved ones, including those who are young carers.

Alongside the investment, the Council has also had to deliver significant savings. This has been achieved through a reduction in management costs, the loss of support staff through voluntary redundancy, the sharing of resources across Council departments, and continuing to find new and innovative ways of working.

Mayor Jules Pipe said:

"Local government across the country is facing huge financial challenges and Hackney is no different. In this financial year, Hackney has had to save £44 million and the Government will be making further grant cuts to councils over the next three years. While Hackney cannot escape the impact of this, I will ensure the Council remains committed to shielding residents from its worst effects."

However, warning of tough choices ahead the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said:

"Local government across the country is facing huge financial challenges and Hackney is no different. Just seven per cent of the Council's funding comes from council tax – the majority of our funding has traditionally come from government grants. Last year, the Government announced it would be making cuts of more than a quarter to the grants it gives to boroughs over the coming four years. In this financial year, Hackney has had to save £44 million as a result of this reduction and the Government will be making further grant cuts to councils over the next three years.

While Hackney cannot escape the impact of this, I will ensure the Council remains committed to shielding residents from its worst effects."

In a move to lessen the impact of the loss of a number of government grants used by Team Hackney to commission services, the Council has earmarked a special fund of over £3 million to step in and pick up and continue particular projects that Team Hackney had commissioned, in priority areas. This money will focus on youth provision and community safety; in areas including youth crime, gang intervention and domestic violence.

Residents will see no rise in their council tax bills this year because Hackney's element of the council tax will not rise from its 2005 level, whilst the charge levied by the Greater London Authority (GLA), which is added to your council tax bill, will not rise this year either. The GLA funds London-wide services including the Metropolitan Police and Transport for London, which runs the buses and Tube.

What the Council spends on services for you

Funded entirely by specific Government grants not transferable to other services

Funded by Government grant and Council Tax (£6 Goverment grant for every £1 Council Tax)

Funded by Government grants and rents

Government grant funding to Hackney Council has been cut by £44 million this financial year. Frontline services are protected this year and this chart shows some of the main areas of spending directly related to your key frontline services. The savings have been delivered through a combination of efficiency savings, a reduction in management costs and loss of support staff through voluntary redundancy, and limiting future investment plans in the borough. Although this successfully prioritises current service delivery, reduced management capacity will have long-term consequences such as the inability for the Council to adapt and develop services as necessary, and reduced investment will limit improvements to the borough's built infrastructure.
